Jyotish gemstones are always worn after checking their efficacy and their harmony with other gemstones, those which one is already wearing. Same is with the Diamond and Ruby too. Each of them represents different groups of planets and their natural effects on their wearers are very diverse too. Although these two gems look very alluring and are among the most expensive of all gems, it is also important to know whether they can be worn by the same person, if used as Jyotish remedial gems.

Most of the people, mostly women, wear diamonds in studded form on their jewelery. As these studded diamonds are fixed on the surface of the jewelery and do not actually touch the skin, they cannot be called Jyotish remedial gems. Only those diamonds which are mounted on rings or pendants, in such a way that they touch the skin, can be considered as remedial gemstones for Venus.

Venus (Shukra) is a planet of love, affection, intimacy, understanding, luxuries, arts and entertainment. Wearing a gemstone like diamond for Venus enhances these qualities of Venus in the personality, thoughts and physical body of the wearer. But, this happens only when Venus (Shukra) is a yogakarak or a beneficial planet in the wearer's horoscope. Otherwise, the same diamond will give quite harmful effects to the wearer in ways of reducing the happiness related to the above mentioned virtues of Venus.

Sun (Surya) represents authority, dominance, austerity, governance, autocracy and subjugation. Wearing a Ruby enhances the positive qualities of Sun which can make the wearer quite fortunate in his career and can improve the health too. But, again, the pre-condition is that the Surya must be a benefic planet in the wearer's horoscope. Otherwise, wearing a Ruby can bring marital discord, disagreements with the superiors and juniors at work, legal problems and health disorders.

So, you can see that Venus and Sun have totally opposite effects on people. They are not even complimentary to each other. If they were mutually beneficial, in ways of elevating each others powers and positive influences, then it they could have been worn together. But, their mutually enemical and opposite nature actually reduces their individual powers when they are made powerful by wearing their gems or by performing their remedies.

So, the conclusion is that a gem for Venus, Diamond or any other gem, and a gemstone for Sun, Ruby or any other gem, must not be worn together. Some astrologers opine that they can be worn on different hands, one on the right and the other on the left. But, they forget the fact that both these hands belong to same body and they are connected to same nervous system and the same brain.

The primary gems which can be worn along with Ruby are Yellow Sapphire (for Jupiter) and Sindoori Coral (for Mars). And, the gems which can be easily worn with Diamond are Emerald (for Mercury) and Blue Sapphire (for Saturn).
